HAVEN Is Chicago

IRVING PARK

Iconic Chicago architecture lives in Irving Park, from Victorian mansions to turn-of-the-century bungalows — some buildings even predate the Great Chicago Fire of 1871. Stroll The Villa District, listed on the National Register of Historic Places, then grab a brew at one of the area's many popular breweries.

PRESERVING THE PAST WHILE EMBRACING THE FUTURE

“I bought my first home without a REALTOR® and swore I would never do it again,” says Cody Shipp of Baird & Warner. His love for old homes and their craftsmanship, and his experiences in homebuying and navigating the process on his own, led him to his REALTOR® career today, albeit with a detour along the way.

Raised in LaSalle, near Starved Rock, he grew up in a 120-year-old home that infused him with an appreciation for quality construction and timeless design. His deep value of those two things has shaped both his passion for architecture and his approach to real estate—and they continue to inspire him.

“I grew up in an old home that taught me the importance of quality and craftsmanship,” says Cody. “Also, my idols throughout my adolescence were my Aunt Mel and Uncle Wally who taught me that preserving the past can sometimes be of better benefit than always starting anew.”

Cody earned his bachelor’s degree in marketing at the University of Dubuque in Iowa before entering the professional world as an advertising account executive. He managed accounts across Wisconsin, Iowa, and Illinois, gaining valuable experience in marketing and client relations. When the startup he worked for suddenly closed its doors, Cody saw it as an opportunity rather than a setback.

“I needed a kick in the buns to make the leap into a terrific career,” he says. That leap was into real estate, an industry that blended his love of homes with his background in client management and sales. Over the last seven years, he has built a thriving career, combining real estate sales with high-end renovation consulting to create a truly unique service for his clients.

Despite his enthusiasm, Cody, like many new agents, faced a steep learning curve regarding navigating the intricacies of negotiations, client expectations, and a constantly shifting market. However, he found strength in his team at Keppy Group through all the support, mentorship, and collaboration they provided him.

“Being part of such a terrific team gives me the ability to now train others while collaborating with thought leaders in the industry,” Cody says.

Shipp credits his team lead, Mark Keppy, with whom he connected through a mutual acquaintance, with helping him sharpen his skills.

“At first, I don’t think he wanted to take me under his wing, but I slowly gained his confidence,” Cody says. “I love getting advice and guidance from Mark. It’s great to have a resource like him to lean on.”

The team at Keppy Group has been growing steadily since Cody joined them—a credit to the expertise within the firm and Cody’s active contributions. Cody highlights their close collaboration and innovative approaches to maintaining their growth even through volatile markets.

“We are great about supporting each other—everything from showings to general advice,” he shares. “Our weekly meetings are fun, productive, and insightful. They also act as a barometer [for us] for market trends, as well as team trends—right down to hyper-local markets based on neighborhood.”

He continues, “With the market changing by the second, we have adapted and changed our approach to client meetings not only to meet our clients’ expectations, but also the expectations of all the parties involved in a real estate transaction. Our team’s resiliency and ability to adapt have demonstrated that we are, and remain, effective in one of the most competitive markets we have ever seen.”

While real estate is his profession, Cody’s passions extend far beyond closing deals. He is actively involved with RE-CONNECT Chicago, a nonprofit organization dedicated to supporting the community. He believes in giving back, particularly in areas that improve the lives of Chicago residents. Outside of work and philanthropy, he enjoys an active lifestyle filled with travel, beer league softball, and quality time with his wife, Kristin Joy, and their beloved dogs, Brody and Murphy.

When Cody thinks about the future, his ambitions are clear. While he has already carved a niche for himself in real estate and renovations, his long-term goal is to build custom homes—a perfect way to blend his background in architecture, love for high-quality construction and timeless design, and his deep understanding of the housing market.

“I’d love to build custom homes,” says Cody. “It’s a dream to combine my admiration for craftsmanship with the unique homes that I sell.”

For Cody, success isn’t about numbers or accolades; it’s about freedom and fulfillment. Success is working for himself.

Cody’s love for quality comes through in his mindset and approach to his work, his craftsmanship, every day: “Drawing from my own journey,” he says, “I take pride in sharing my knowledge and expertise, ensuring that my clients are equipped to make informed decisions with confidence.

Cody with his colleague and team lead, Mark Keppy.

Joe Burke

Getting Personal

BY CHRIS MENEZES

When mortgage lender Joe Burke first shared his story with Real Producers back in 2023, the focus of his business was clear: trust, expertise, and communication. A year later, the fundamentals haven't changed. But the story has grown.

Because for Joe, success isn't just about transactions. It's about people. It's about showing up—consistently, personally, and authentically—and building something that lasts longer than any loan.

“Anyone can talk rates and numbers,” Joe says. “But what really makes a difference is how you make people feel during the process. That's what they remember.”

Today, Joe is now the senior vice president of mortgage lending with OriginPoint, part of the Rate family. While his company name and national platform have evolved, his hands-on, relationship-first approach has stayed exactly the same.

Joe leads a boutique team that feels more like a close-knit family than a corporate machine. Quick access, honest communication, and real-time decision-making are what agents and clients can expect—whether it's a Monday morning or a Saturday night.

“If an agent or client needs me at 7 pm on a Saturday, I'm there,” Joe says. “If I'm not, they might lose the deal. It's that simple.”

Since his last spotlight, Joe has sharpened his focus even further—working one-on-one with agents, hosting small client events, and building personalized strategies that reflect a changing market.

“Instead of choosing [to do] broad marketing, I'm going deep,” he says. “I'm choosing real relationships over volume.”

That commitment to being present isn't just professional, it's personal.

Joe and his wife, Julie, are raising two daughters—a high school junior and a freshman—and much of Joe's world now revolves around family milestones and quiet moments. One daughter is exploring colleges and starring in school plays, and the other is balancing basketball, field hockey, and lacrosse. Weekends often mean juggling rehearsals, games, and family dinners at their favorite local spot, Club Lucky in Bucktown.

“These years seem to fly by,” Joe says. “That's why it's important to me to be there—not just physically, but really there with and for them.”

When he's not working or driving the carpool, you might find Joe hiking with his wife, exploring Wisconsin's state parks; playing guitar; cooking; or taking their golden retriever to the park. Music is a big part of Joe's life, too. His taste spans from Frank Black and the Pixies to the Grateful Dead, Phish, and Wilco. He and Julie never miss a chance to catch a live show.

“I try to remind my kids: work hard, but don't let work consume you,” Joe says. “There's so much more to life.”

It's a perspective that now runs through every part of his business. For Joe, getting personal isn't just about connecting on birthdays or celebrating milestones; it's about how you show up when it matters most.

Agents are trusting me with their clients and their reputation...
I take that personally.”

When agents work with Joe, they're getting a partner who values relationships over volume. He offers weekly economic updates, direct access to his team (including processors and underwriters), and a simple commitment: the truth, even when it's not the easiest answer.

"Agents are trusting me with their clients and their reputation," he says. "I take that personally."

Looking ahead, Joe's vision for the next few years is clear: deepen relationships, grow strategically with agents who value service, and expand OriginPoint's footprint across the Chicago real estate community.

"I want to be the guy agents call—not just because I close loans fast, but because they know I'll have their back no matter what," he says.

Because for Joe Burke, success isn't measured in awards or accolades. It's measured in trust, relationships, and living a life you can be proud of—both personally and professionally.

Camie Cirrincione

The Long Game

BY CHRIS MENEZES
PHOTOS BY PRESTIGE REAL ESTATE IMAGES

They say slow and steady wins the race—and few stories capture that better than Camie Cirrincione’s.

While some agents sprint out of the gate, Camie built her real estate career like she built her life: one step at a time. No shortcuts. No fast tracks. Just consistency, resilience, and deep care for the people she serves.

She’s been a licensed REALTOR® since 2011, but for many years, real estate was just one of several jobs she juggled as a single mom. She bartended, managed a restaurant, worked in corporate travel—all while raising three kids and helping friends buy and sell homes on the side. “I always loved real estate, but I needed health insurance. I needed stability. And I wasn’t ready to risk it all on real estate,” she explains.

That all changed five years ago.

Once she committed to being a full-time agent, she never looked back. Camie has since sold over 270 homes, built a thriving business with Redfin, and earned a place among Chicago’s most respected agents. “I just love meeting people and quickly earning their trust during one of the biggest times of their lives,” she says. “Everyone’s story is different. That’s what makes it meaningful.”

Camie’s own story begins with family. It was her father, a carpenter who later launched his own custom homebuilding business, in particular who instilled in her the values of hard work and perseverance. “He went through the ups and downs, and at one point lost almost everything,” Camie says. “But he never let it keep him down. That’s the work ethic I try to live by and pass down to my kids.”

She’s carried that strength through both personal and professional challenges. Early on, she navigated single motherhood with determination, balancing parenting with multiple jobs. Then came her greatest test: losing her mother (52) and two brothers (27 and 32) in a single year. “It still hurts,” she shares. “But I remind myself that it hurts so much because I was blessed to have such an amazing mom and two brothers who left a huge impact on those left behind.”

That empathy and perspective fuel her approach to real estate. Whether walking first-time buyers through their dream purchase or guiding some clients through the process as they navigate painful transitions, Camie brings calm, compassion, and fierce loyalty to all her clients. “I’m not the biggest producer,” she says. “But I give everything I’ve got. And I’m proud of what I’ve built.”

What she’s built goes beyond numbers. Camie is passionate about her team, her clients, and the example she sets. “I work a lot, and my kids have always known that I want to be there for my clients the same way I want to be there for them,” she says. “It’s all connected—how you show up matters.”

At home, Camie’s family keeps her grounded: her longtime partner, Jerry, and her three adult children—Trevor,

Skyler, and Carly. Family is everything to Camie, and although her kids are grown now, they all remain incredibly close. “We love hanging out whenever we can,” she says. They cook together, watch sports (Camie’s still holding out hope for the Bears), travel when they can, and make the most of any time they have together. “Because my kids are alums of the Universities of Alabama and Missouri and Marquette University, it can get competitive in the house during March Madness!”

Camie also knows how to unwind. “Give me a walk along the lakefront or a glass of wine and a great meal, and I’m happy,” she laughs. A foodie at heart, Camie loves discovering new places as much as she loves going out for classic Chicago eats.

Though work often takes center stage, she’s no stranger to adventure: she’s been skydiving, scuba diving, parasailing; has flown on a private plane; and wants to learn how to drive a motorcycle at some point. Also, for many years Camie and her family ran the Sperling Brothers Foundation that was created in memory of her brothers. She hopes to find more free time to do more volunteer work in the future.

Looking ahead, Camie is optimistic. With Rocket Mortgage® acquiring Redfin, a new chapter is beginning and she’s ready to grow. “I want to keep learning, caring, and showing up for my clients,” she says. “Success is not about the number of houses you’ve sold; it’s about how you went about it and what you did next.”

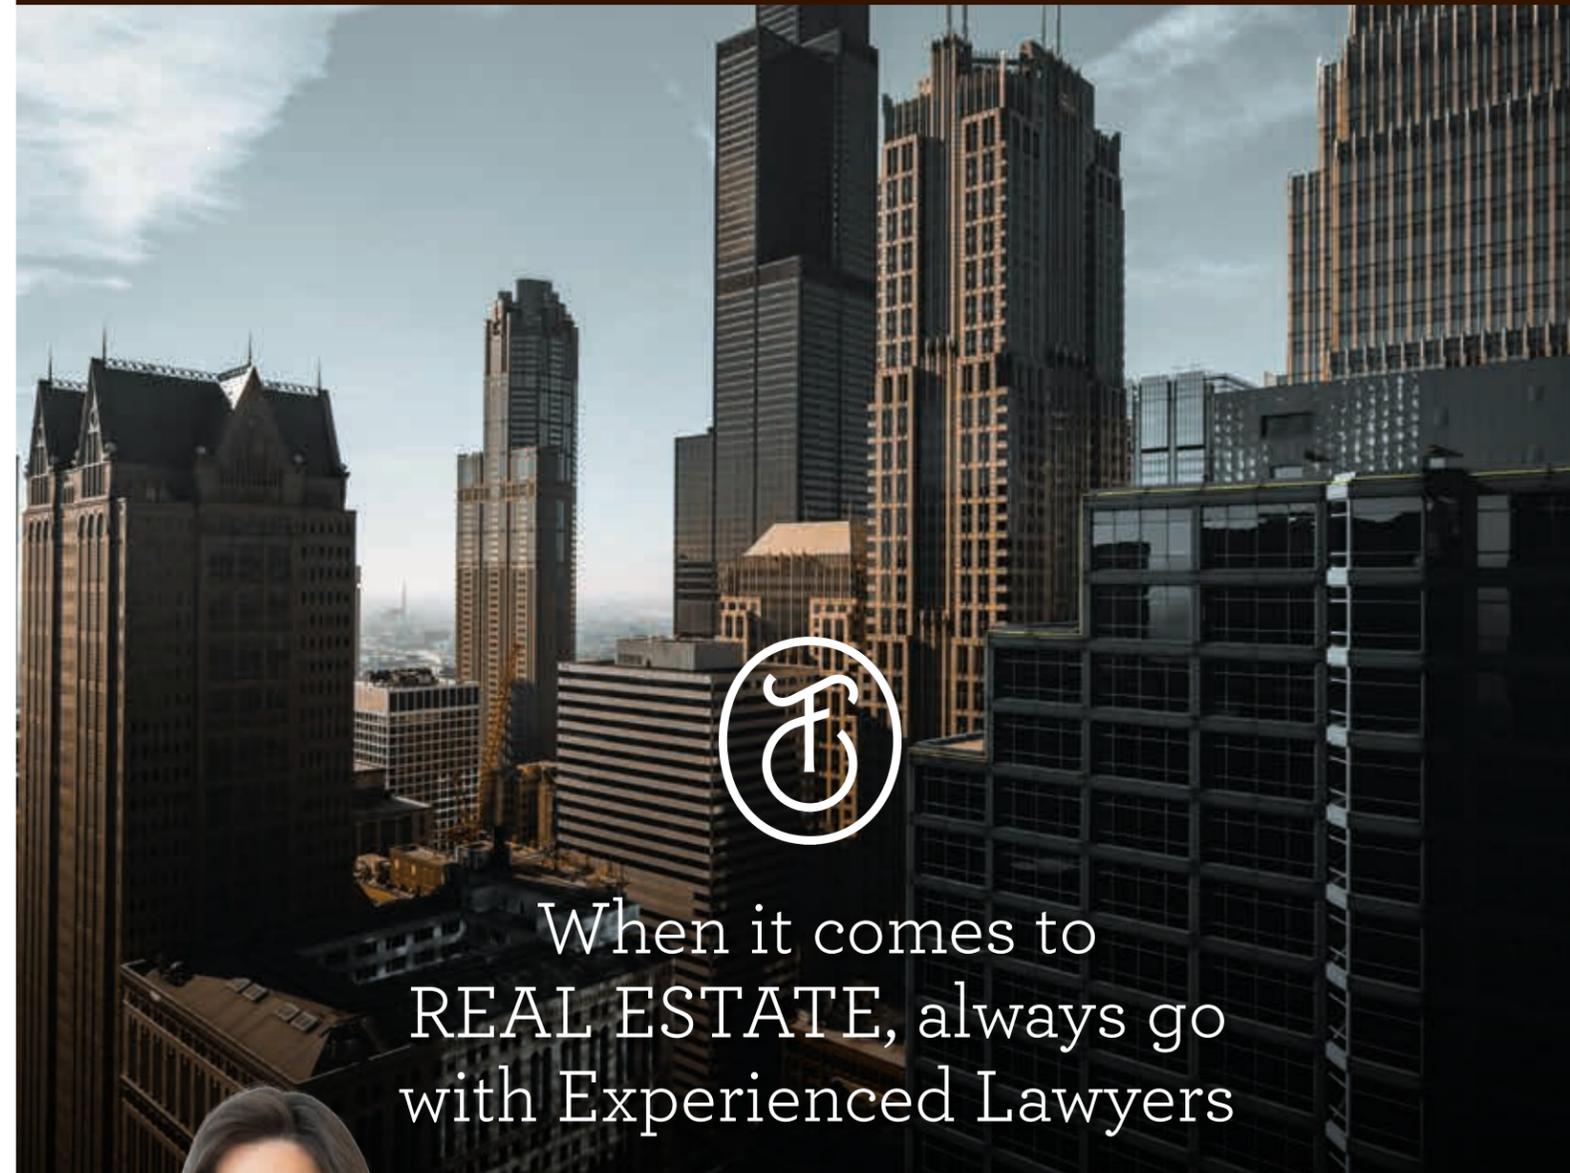

Asked what she’d share with others in the business, Camie doesn’t hesitate: “Be real. Communicate. Build relationships. This isn’t a solo sport—we’re all in this together. Also, don’t be afraid to show failure because it allows people to open up to you. Just never give up; fight to that finish line.”

For Camie Cirrincione, the path to real estate wasn’t quick—it was steady, grounded, and true. And that’s what makes it powerful. Every home sold, every relationship built, every moment of growth—it all led here.

Embodying a brilliant resiliency, Camie continues to appreciate every day while she adds to her story that’s founded on her core belief: never give up.

THE CURRENCY OF CALM: WHY CERTAINTY OUTPERFORMS HUSTLE

Words: Josh Kercher
Photography: Jason Peterson

This is the third chapter in a series I began here in Chicago Real Producers. In my last article, "Why You're Still Tired (Even When You're Winning)," I pulled back the curtain on the truth most high achievers don't want to admit: that success built on borrowed goals and unsustainable energy doesn't feel like success at all. It feels like survival in expensive clothes.

If you missed it, go back. That piece lays the groundwork — why exhaustion haunts even the top producers, and what happens when your outer polish outpaces your inner clarity. This one builds on that foundation. Because once you know why you're tired, the question becomes: what actually restores you?

The answer isn't more hustle. It's calm.

THE CURRENCY OF CALM CONT'D

Why Calm Wins

Hustle is a short-term currency. It spends fast. It burns bright. But it never lasts.

The producers you admire most aren't necessarily the loudest or the busiest. They aren't the ones frantically juggling three phones or sprinting from deal to deal. They're the calm center everyone else orbits.

Calm wins because:

- Clients don't hire chaos. They buy certainty. In the middle of a storm, your composure is the real product.
- Teams don't follow speed. They follow stability. Leaders who project calm turn pressure into confidence.
- Markets reward signal. Hustle is noise. Calm is clarity.

What Calm Really Is

Calm isn't about slowing down your ambition. It's about strengthening the bones underneath your success so you don't fracture when the market accelerates.

You've seen it — high performers who dominate for a few seasons and then disappear. Not because they weren't talented, but because they built on adrenaline instead of alignment.

Real calm is forged from foundations most people ignore:

- The sleep you've been sacrificing.
- The recovery you've been skipping.
- The boundaries you've blurred until you're always "on."
- The goals you've borrowed that never belonged to you in the first place.

The Rare Ones Checklist: Turning Calm Into Currency

- 1. Audit your baseline. Before you chase growth, check your foundations. Energy leaks aren't fixed by working harder.
- 2. Recover like it's a skill. Sleep, stillness, reflection — treat them with the same rigor you treat strategy.
- 3. Signal certainty. Clients don't need to see how frantic you are. They need to feel how clear you are.
- 4. Simplify your pace. Subtraction creates gravity. Busyness doesn't impress anyone; presence does.
- 5. Train calm under pressure. Don't wait for crises. Build daily practices — breathwork, reflection, stillness — that anchor you when the market shakes.

A Closing Note

Calm is not passive. It's active mastery. It's what separates the hustlers from the builders, the ones who burn bright and fade from the ones who build legacies. Hustle may close a deal. Calm builds an empire.

In an industry addicted to hustle, certainty is the rarest signal of all. Protect it. Build it. Let people feel it every time you walk in the room. Hustle fades. Calm compounds. And if you want to dress the part of a man who carries that presence? You know where to find me.

Christine No Fluff, Just Fire Egley-Rashkow

BY CHRIS MENEZES • BY CALEB PICKMAN

FOR CHRISTINE EGLEY-RASHKOW, REAL ESTATE ISN'T ABOUT SALES. IT'S ABOUT SHOWING UP. EVERY TIME. WITH FULL HONESTY, SHARP INSTINCTS, AND ZERO PRETENSE.

“What you see is what you get,” she says. “I don’t sugarcoat things or overpromise. I believe in setting expectations and telling you the truth, even when it’s not what you want to hear. That’s how trust is built.”

That mindset was forged long before real estate ever entered the picture. Raised in Illinois, Christine lost her father at seventeen and had to grow up fast. She went on to earn both a bachelor’s and a master’s degree in health administration from Southern Illinois University Carbondale, supporting herself by waiting tables and bartending. It taught her how to juggle pressure, read people quickly, and stay sharp when everything’s moving at once—skills that now serve her every day in the business.

She moved to Chicago after grad school and began her career in healthcare, working for a staffing startup that placed per diem nurses and physicians. The company’s founder, a real estate developer, is the person who sparked Christine’s interest in real estate—an interest that grew deeper years later when she and her then-husband built a home in North Shore.

“I loved watching the design come together,” she says. “That whole process lit something in me. I started connecting with builders and contractors and discovered I had a real passion for it.”

Christine earned her real estate license in 2006, but when the market crashed soon after, she stepped away to focus on family. When she returned in 2011, life looked different: she was going through a divorce and navigating single motherhood while rebuilding her career from the ground up.

“It wasn’t easy,” she says. “Being a single mom in the city, trying to juggle showings and still be there for my daughter—it pushed me in every way. But I had an incredible network of friends who helped when I needed it. That support meant everything.”

Those years taught Christine to stay calm under pressure and meet people where they are. But most importantly, they taught her to rely on herself and lean into her niche of home building and design—helping people see the potential in homes. “I love walking someone through a place that has good bones and showing them how a few updates can completely transform it,” she says.

Another turning point for Christine came in 2020, just three days before the pandemic shut down the world, when she moved to Jameson Sotheby’s International Realty. “It was a leap,” she says. “I had no idea what was going to happen, but it turned out to be the best decision I’ve ever made.”

When you find people who share your values and work ethic, everything clicks. It’s been life-changing.”

The switch gave her full control of her business and aligned her with a brand that matched the caliber of service she’d been delivering for years. She also partnered with a few like-minded agents at Sotheby’s—a shift that’s brought new energy and collaboration to her work. “When you find people who share your values and work ethic, everything clicks. It’s been life-changing.”

Today, Christine splits her time, and business, between Chicago and southern Florida, where she and her partner, Rick, are building a home on Marco Island. She says that acting as their own general contractors has only deepened her knowledge of construction—something she plans to take even further. “Our goal is to start building spec homes in Florida,” she says. “It’s exciting to create something beautiful while designing a lifestyle that gives us a little more freedom.”

Outside of real estate, Christine finds joy in movement and creativity. Her daughter, Keava, now a senior at Loyola Academy, is a talented dancer—and Christine still dances too. She’s recently returned to the studio after recovering from a broken ankle and is even considering participating in a local “Dancing with the Stars” fundraiser this fall.

“It’s not just about staying fit. It’s about doing things that make you feel like you again,” she says.

That extends to deep-sea fishing, another unexpected passion for Christine. She and Rick often fish their way down to the Florida Keys. “I never thought I’d love it, but it’s incredibly peaceful. I’ve even caught a few sharks.”

Through it all, Christine has redefined success on her own terms—not through flash or speed, but by showing up with consistency, clarity, and care. It’s a mindset that’s carried her through life’s biggest challenges and into the business she was always meant to build.

“Everything is going to be okay,” she advises other agents. “Just keep moving forward. And stop doubting yourself.”

“When I was a little boy, I used to walk around new-construction home sites and imagine what their layouts would become,” says Rich Aronson, REALTOR® and team leader of the AVE Group at Compass. That early curiosity, along with his innate desire to explore, was the beginning of his lifelong love of real estate.

He was born in Chicago’s Buena Park neighborhood, but seeking a slice of suburban life, his family soon moved to Lincolnwood, where young Rich began to explore those home development projects. He majored in finance with a specialization in corporate banking at the University of Illinois Urbana–Champaign. From there, he earned his law degree from DePaul University College of Law, graduating in 1990 and starting a career as a lawyer and lobbyist with the National Association of Independent Insurers.

“I practiced law for seven-and-a-half years before becoming a developer and then a REALTOR®,” says Rich. “My legal background and financial education gave me the foundation to pivot seamlessly into real estate.”

In 1995, Rich bought his first rehab project: a three-bedroom condo in Uptown. By 1998, he had earned his real estate license and launched his own brokerage, Camelot Realty. While Rich entered the field to help his development business, he quickly discovered that he had a passion for guiding others through the buying and selling process. Representing himself in deals soon expanded to representing clients of all kinds—from first-time homebuyers to seasoned investors and developers.

“Initially, I became a REALTOR® to grow my development business,” he says, “but eventually that grew into a desire to be a full-time real estate broker.”

That passion was tested during the 2008 housing crisis, one of the most difficult periods in modern real estate history. Rich responded with grit and strategy. He rebranded himself as a full-service agent, leaning into his adaptability and legal acumen to stabilize his business in a volatile market.

“I survived the real estate depression of 2008 and 2009 by rebranding myself as a full-service REALTOR® after having been mostly a developer’s broker. I formed the AVE Group in 2019 and moved to Compass in July of 2024 after five years with Berkshire Hathaway HomeServices Chicago to respond to the changing development market, help smooth out my income, and stay connected to the industry I love,” he says.

Since then, Rich has built a reputation as a consistent, results-driven advocate for his clients. His advice to new REALTORS® is to “be the most zealous advocate for your clients, [then] the rest flows naturally.” That approach has led to a thriving business, even through market shifts, with his team growing steadily over the past five years.

Rich Aronson

CURIOSITY TO CAREER
BY LAUREN YOUNG • PHOTOS BY NANCY VELA

The AVE Group includes Aaron Weinstein, who specializes in investment sales, and Caitlyn Schermerhorn, a residential sales expert with a background in titles. Together, they balance residential, development, and investment listings with a high-touch client experience. Their complementary strengths allow them to serve a wide range of buyers and sellers with personalized care and precision.

“Our business has grown 20–30 percent over the past five years,” Rich says. “We achieved that by sticking with our clients no matter how long it takes to find the right property.”

Rich’s passion extends beyond business. He supports the Howard Brown Health Center and other local organizations, and he has served and been a member of the Rogers Park Builders Group for over twenty years. Rich is also deeply rooted in family. His life partner, Nyan Tucker, shares his love for travel and fitness. His mother, Yvonne, is a Holocaust survivor who now educates others about her experience. His siblings, Larry and Lori, are equally driven and family-oriented people.

“I like to travel to exotic destinations, play golf with friends, and ride my bike along the lakefront,” Rich says. “I also love pop art collectables, fashion, and restoring classic pieces like my 1967 Lincoln Continental convertible.”

His wide-ranging interests include politics, stock market investing, and stand-up comedy. One of his most memorable moments was attending a live Eddie Murphy show in college with his best friend, where Murphy interacted with them from the stage.

Looking ahead, Rich plans to continue growing the AVE Group’s presence in North Shore and deepen his work with developers and builders. He dreams of one day returning to his development roots, but this time, taking on a grand European project.

“I dream of rehabbing an old castle or manor home in Europe and converting it into a fabulous bed and breakfast or boutique hotel,” he says.

For Rich, success is defined not by sales alone, but by helping clients achieve their goals with care and true excellence in service. His journey from a childhood curiosity to career success reveals his consistent, genuine love for building, exploration for discovery, and helping others find home.

Be the most zealous advocate for your clients, [then] the rest
