

Learning Bird

We support First Nations, Métis, and Inuit schools and communities in building curriculum and digital resources.

How We Do This

Collaborative Resource Creation

Our team creates learning materials, including complete resource kits, vocabulary and conversation videos, interview or instruction-driven videos, animated videos, presentations, handouts and activities, posters, and more. We can also create Educator Guides that provide ideas for using these resources in the classroom.

Our team will collaborate with your educators and staff to create resources that meet your curriculum goals while integrating your community's language, culture, and teachings. Our collaborative model reduces the effort involved for your team while ensuring that the materials are accurate and reflective of your community.

We will work together to plan the topics and themes. Our team will write the resource outlines and scripts and build any necessary storyboards. Your team will provide input and approval before our team creates an initial copy of the digital resources.

Curriculum and Course Development

Our education specialists have experience designing and writing curricula and developing custom credit courses. We can work with your school or community to create localized curricula, including language and culture, land-based, or custom-topic course development.

We can provide additional support to move your projects forward quickly while ensuring that all materials are thoroughly reviewed and approved by your community.

Community Language-Learning Resources

We can help build videos, activity sheets, flashcards, posters, games, and other language-learning resources for community members. We can even help you mobilize these resources for broad distribution through your website and social media channels.

Digitization Services

We can help you digitize audio and video cassettes, language books, historical documents, instructional materials, and more. We can also support you in reimagining them for use in your programs and with community members.

Local Interviews and Footage Collection

Our education specialists have the technical skills and knowledge of Protocols to film activities, skills demonstrations, and interviews and collect footage of people and places in your community. Our team has experience working with Elders, Knowledge Keepers, and language speakers.

If travel is not an option, we have professional tools to conduct virtual interviews. We can also guide community members to collect audio recordings, photography, and interviews. This can help build capacity and skills for future projects.

Professional Development Workshops

We offer many hands-on professional development sessions for educators. Our team delivers sessions as 2-hour or 4-hour in-person or virtual workshops.

Our workshop topics include Outdoor Learning, Integrating Technology in the Classroom, Assessment, and Lesson Planning: Incorporating Indigenous Pedagogies. We can also work with you to build a custom PD session for your team's unique needs.

Educator Training and Coaching

We offer virtual educator training and one-on-one or small-group coaching to help educators integrate resources into their lesson plans and instruction. We can design a program with the right mix of support to ensure that your educators feel confident in incorporating new resources into their instruction.
